He was a fashion icon and coordinated. Bro came to work one day with some gold Nike shoes. He told me his feet was hurting so bad and said he wouldn't wear them again. I teased him frequently about "the Gold Nike's". Glad to know he's walking the great street of the city of gold.

My dearest Dre, I am grateful for the time that God allowed us to work, laugh and share a couple of tears together and that my friend I will keep close to my heart. You truly are one of a kind from your smile to the Gucci bags you wore! We are all given the book called "Life" and I am truly grateful that God included me in your story. All I can say Dre' is that you wrote a BEST SELLER my friend. Until we see each other again I love you my friend and my Boo Boo. The Harris Center will never be the same without you!

I saw Dre last week outside of work by his vehicle, smiling from ear to ear- if you knew him that was him, always smiling. In every meeting we shared, or even just in passing moments, he always carried that same joy. His spirit truly exuded joy, and you could feel it. It was the kind of presence that lighted a room without him even trying. I'm lifting his family, friends, coworkers, and The Harris Center in prayer- for comfort in the quiet moments, strength for the difficult days, encouragement when it feels heavy, and hope for the days, months, and years ahead. Dre, your smile, your spirit, and the way you showed up will not be forgotten. Take your rest.

Dre, You were truly the highlight of my morning. Those quiet hours before the office filled up—when the hallways were still dark and it was just the two of us—were the moments I looked forward to most. Your humor and your refreshing frankness didn't just make me laugh; they were an anchor that helped me navigate the daunting challenge of starting in a new environment. When I mentioned my trip to China to visit my parents, your request for a souvenir stayed with me. It wasn't just about an object; it was your genuine curiosity about a world on the other side of the globe that felt so sincere. Sharing that Chinese green tea with you was a moment I'll always treasure. I remember explaining how different it was—no tea bags, just natural leaves and hot water. As I poured the steaming water into your cup, I knew you weren't used to the intensity of loose-leaf tea or the high temperatures I prefer. Yet, there you were, sitting with me, sipping that steaming cup with a smile on your face. I left you my insulated cup so that the warmth would last through your refills, and seeing you enjoy it made me so happy. In those moments, we didn't realize we were making memories; we just knew we were having fun. You will be forever missed, Dre. I'm leaving you with a fresh supply of those same tea leaves—my final souvenir for you. Hopefully, by now, you've learned to let them cool down just a little bit before that first sip. With gratitude, Qingling Zhang
